SPEND SOME TIME IN TENNESSEE.

OFFICES WHICH HE IS TO FILL-MR. KINKEL

Mayor-elect Schieren left Brooklyn yesterday for Philadelphia on his way to Bristol, Tenn., where he is erecting a new tannery. He will get a complete rest before he returns to Brooklyn in about ten days. He will devote the rest of the year to a careful study of the city charter and the reports furnished him by the heads of departments, so as to prepare his first message, which will be sent Aldermen on the first Monday of January. The terms of the present heads of departments will not expire until thirty days after the new Mayor takes office, and he will then have thirty days within which to appoint their successors. If no successor is appointed by the end of that time for any head of a department he shall be considered as reappointed for the term of two years. NEW MEN FOR DEPARTMENT HEADS.

There is no likelihood that Mayor Schieren wil retain any of the men at the head of the city de-partments, as they are all identified with the Ring

Smaller sums were spent by the Young Republican and Young Democratic clubs, the Citizens' Union and the Brooklyn Democratic Club.

The regular Democratic organization had $150.000 to expend. Mayor Boody subscribed $2.500 to the campaign fund from his salary of $10.000. All the subordinate officeholders were assessed in like proportion, down to the humblest clerks. Every Democratic captain of an election district had $150 to spend in each of the 656 districts.

The bureau for ferretting out cases of fraudulent voting in Brooklyn was busy yesterday in getting facts ready to present to the Grand Jury, so as to indict the persons already accused. Further efforts will be made to get information that will lead to successful prosecution of the "floaters," many of whom voted in the river wards on Tuesday. The prosecution will be conducted so as to prevent illegal voting in the future, if possible. The handbills settling forth the rewards offered for evidence that will convict will be circulated in all lodging-houses.

THE IRON AND STEEL TRADE LOOKING UP.

MANUFACTURERS ENCOURAGED BY THE RESULT OF TUESDAY'S VOTING.

Cleveland, Nov. 9 .- "The Iron Trade Review" to day says: "There is an improved condition in the iron and steel market in consequence of Tuesday's election results—a sentimental improvement, at least. It may not show itself in any advance in prices, but in a greater willingness to trade. Iron and steel manufacturers are protectionists and their business practice, conforms to their business. their business practice conforms to their belief.
The hesitancy about concluding pending negotiations for large amounts of iron which we chronicled im-mediately after the election of 1832 was the result of a fear that values, which had advanced 25 cents in the case of raw iron, would recode. To-day, as reports from a number of sources indicate, there is a feeling that buyers, who have been predicting a slight change for the better in the event of emphatic majorities in protest against Free Trade, will enter the market for larger purchases then they have been making in the past four or five months of depression. While the feeling of uncertainty about the exact terms of the new fron and steel schedule still exists, there is a belief that the changes will not go to the disastrous fron and steel schedule still exists, there is a belief that the changes will not go to the disastrous length once feared, and that the popular expression has been too strong and too positive to be ignored. To have this belief receive wide acceptance is to be counted as a distinct gain.

"As far as the past week is concerned the features to be noted in the trade are the better feeling at Pittsburg in the markets for soft steel billets and Bessemer pig and the efforts of some billets and Bessemer pig and the efforts of some billets and Bessemer pig and the efforts of some billets and Bessemer pig and the efforts of some feeling at Pittsburg in the markets for soft steel billets and Bessemer pig and the efforts of some fourhern producers of pig fron to stiffen prices. While there have been sales of Southern gray forge in Northern markets at times within the past three months on a basis of $6.50, and even $5.40 at furnace, a sale is noted within the past week at a figure not far from $7 furnace. This, however, is 25 to 35 cents better than the average Southern furnace is able to get in closely competitive markets. On Bersemer pig at Pittsburg better prices have been realized than were posticle two and three weeks ago, and the $11.25 which represented the extreme depression no longer appears in transactions. It would be fair to quote ale market at $11.50 to $11.75. In billets there is also an improvement—a large number of sales and an advance from the very low busis of well-known transactions of October. Pittsburg mills are all employed in a way, but there is still an absence of orders involving such tonnage as would mean steady employment for a period of weeks. With the resumption in other Pennsylvania mills the past week, there is such an increase in capacity as will continue the sharp struggle for orders for some time to come. The demand for street rails, which explains the resumption of the Pennsylvania mills the past week, there is such an increase in capacity as will continue the sharp struggle for orders for counted as a distinct gain.

"As far as the past week is concerned the features to be noted in the trade are the better feeling at Pittaburg in the markets for soft steel billets and Bessemer pig and the efforts of some Southern producers of pig iron to stiffen prices, while there have been sales of Southern gray forge in Northern markets at times within the past free months on a basis of $50, and even so at furnace, a sale is noted within the past of the sales of southern producers of pig iron to stiffen prices, and the sales of $50, and even so at furnace, a sale is noted within the past of the sales of $50, and even so at furnace, a sale is noted within the past of the sales of $50, and even so at furnace, a sale is noted within the past of $50, and even so at furnace, a sale is noted within the past of $50, and even so at furnace, a sale is noted within the past of $50, and even so at furnace, a sale is noted within the past of $50, and even so at $50, and even so at

MR. SCHIEREN GOES SOUTH. NOW THEY THINK IT MURDER.

THE MAYOR-ELECT OF BROOKLYN TO DELINQUENT POLICE AT LAST ROUSED IN THE CASE OF DR. G. W. LOVATI.

THE EXTREMELY SUSPICIOUS CIRCUMSTANCES

The November Grand Jury will to-day start in the investigation of a case which affords a valuable object-lesson in the methods of the modernday precinct police. On the night of October 20 Dr. Galen W. Lovatt, an advertising physician who for years had gained notice in connection with what is called an "Indian Vegetable Specific," methis death from a pistol shot in the house No. 167 West Twenty-first-st., kepi by a woman named Kate Gardner, better known as "Blonde Kate." On the first discovery of Dr. Lovatt's unconscious form, with a bullet hole in the left temple, the Nincteenth Precinct police and the newspaper men comfortably settled on a verdict of suicide, blindly closing their eyes to the many peculiar and unexplained circumstances connected with the death. Of all the newspapers in New-York The Tribune was alone in the suggest on that Dr. Lovatt had been murdered. To The Tribune and The Tribune been murdered. To The Tribune and The Tribur and next the circumstance that the lines following the signature had been added as an afterthought on the part of the writer. The Nineteenth Precinct police, fearful of admixing that a house of the character described by MFs. Lovatt existed in their precinct, stopped action on the case. Inquiry showed that at the time of Dr. Lovatt's death there were present in the house Mrs. Gardner; her mother, Mrs. McDowell; Georgie Matthews and Emma Broderick, "actresses," who wear rouge and diamonds; a man known as Jack Conrey, who spent most of his time with Mrs. Gardner and had the manner of a typical Sixthavenue swaggerer, and Arthur Pendar, a theatrical agent, who carries his office in his hat. At the inquest held yesterday these people, all Tenderioin veterans, with one exception swore that they heard the shots, but were too scared to leave the room. The exception was Conrey, who ran away immediately after the shooting and is supposed to be working on a railroad. They do not explain the disappearance of the $700, or why they waited three-quarters of an hour before calling assistance. Mrs. Lovatt swore that her husband never signed himself "Dr. G. W. Lovatt," but "G. W. Lovatt, M. D."; her son said, further, that his father was a right-handed man, and that the note was not in his handwriting. Dr. Chambers, house surgeon of the New-York Hospital, declared that the black eyes and the bruises had been caused by a blow, and not by the force of the shot, and his evidence made it certain that the bullet wound could not have been self-indicted either by a right or left-handed man. Assistant District-Attorney McIntyre set forth these convincing points to the jury, which delivered its verdict after a brief deliberation. Mr. McIntyre at once began to prepare the evidence for submission to the Grand Jury while the police are looking for Conrey.
